Jim Turner, Historian

Jim Turner is a retired historian from the Arizona Historical Society and is now a freelance editor, teacher, researcher, and author. His family moved to Tucson in 1951 and he has been studying Arizona history for thirty-six years. Jim received his Masters degree in U.S. history from the University of Arizona, and now teaches history for Central Arizona College. He has worked with more than 70 museums around the state, and enjoys writing history articles for The Globe-Miami Times, the Arizona Daily Star, and the Capitol Times. Jim's new pictorial history book, "Arizona: Celebrating the Grand Canyon State," was judged one of the Top Ten Books of the Year by former University of Arizona Library Director David Laird.

Released in October, 2011, it quickly went into its second printing. Turner says that with more than 520 beautiful and historic pictures this coffee table book, a broad brush history, has "more text than a photo book and more photos than a text book."
